

Post-COVID Greetings: Skip The Handshake

While shaking hands is a very American way of greeting strangers and saying hello and goodbye to friends, it's not as typical in other cultures. Here are 9 ways to greet someone that do not involve shaking hands.

- 1 Nod Your Head: A simple nod of the head towards the person is a friendly and universally understood greeting.
- 2 Smile: A causal but open smile with your hands at your side is friendly and welcoming.
- 3 Use Your Words: Simply say "Hello" in greeting.
- 4 Hand On Heart: Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez recently tweeted that her favorite handshake alternative is "to put my hand over my heart and smile/nod at whomever I am greeting."
- 5 Pass Your Business Card: Instead of extending your hand to shake, hand over your business card. This is a common business practice in Japan.
- 6 Air-Five: Jim and Pam's cross the room high-five on The Office is safe and sure to bring a smile!
- 7 Namaste: The Hindu greeting of your palms pressed together pointing upward in front of your chest with a small bow is recognized as a greeting and goodbye.
- 8 Raise Your Hand: Lift your right hand as if you are taking an oath of office.
- 9 Hawaiian Shaka Sign: A wave with 3 middle fingers folded down and your pinky and thumb are pointed upward is a commonly used greeting.
