Five Important Factors In Building A Squad With Teamwork

Specific factors that mold a team

GOAL FACTOR

- [ ] Setting your team goals allow each of your member to lead and guide each other. Having the same goals with your colleagues lead to a stronger bond and molds a perfect example of a team.

COMMUNICATION FACTOR

- [ ] Better and effective teams are those whose members have open Communication with each other in a vibe where they can talk and listen.

TRUST FACTOR

- [ ] Without trust, members will be merely working in the same place individually. Each member should trust their colleagues that they will actively perform their specific tasks and duties well.

PROGRESS FACTOR

- [ ] Sometimes, new situations or information affects all efforts to achieve the goal. It is important, therefore, to conduct a review of the progress from time to time.
- [ ] This allows you more time to rectify weak methods and troubleshoot sudden problems that may occur.

COOPERATION FACTOR

- [ ] Effective teams encourage cooperation, rather than competition, among its members Without cooperation, team goals are more like to fail.

Make and Share Free Checklists

checkli.com