

Sales Call Agenda

Preparation and planning are key to a successful sales call. A written agenda for your sales meeting demonstrates your professionalism and organization to your prospect. Whether you are meeting one-on-one or both teams are meeting, once you develop a sales call checklist it can be adapted to use again and again to both increase your productivity and boost your sales.

- ☐ A written agenda is a checklist of what is important for you to cover in your sales call so you don't forget important steps in the client relationship process.

Before The Meeting

- ☐ Confirm meeting time, purpose and participants in writing
- ☐ Research your prospect and identify how your product or service can solve their problem
- ☐ Create agenda
- ☐ Distribute agenda to key participants
- ☐ Distribute any needed support materials for the meeting

During The Meeting

- ☐ Greet, Welcome and Thank: Introduce yourself, your company and any key players
  - ☐ Prospect introduces themselves, their company and any key players
  - ☐ Review meeting objective
  - ☐ Ask your prospect to explain their needs or business goals: why did they take the meeting?
  - ☐ Distribute any support materials

- ☐ Present your information, facts or products
- ☐ Explain how your product or service can meet your prospect's needs (as identified above)
- ☐ Answer prospect questions and allow time for input from your prospect
- ☐ Ask what your prospects decision process is: key players, timing, logistics
- ☐ Define followup actions needed
- ☐ Schedule next meeting and/or next steps

After The Meeting

- ☐ Followup in writing within 24 hours, thanking your prospect for the meeting and acknowledging your prospect's key questions and concerns
- ☐ Respond to all followup actions in a timely manner
