What is B2B Influencer Marketing - And How to Use It

B2B influencer marketing is very different from B2C. Businesses do not shop the same ways that consumers do. But for both B2B and B2C, the key is people buy from people. As sales and marketing pros, B2B buyers are not easily influenced by a celebrity social media post. B2B influencers must have industry credibility and the marketing must take place in an industry-respected network or platform.

Types of B2B Influencers: Ashley Zeckman of TopRank Marketing spoke at MarketingProfs B2B Forum and said there are 5 main influencer types and characteristics that B2B brands should consider: https://www.toprankblog.com/2018/11/collaborating-with-influencers

	Brandividual: Recognizable and increases your reach. Great for bringing in new audiences.
	Up & Comer: Quickly gaining momentum and notoriety within their industry. Very motivated to collaborate and share.
	Niche Expert: Very deep expertise on specific topics that resonate with your audience.
	Internal Expert: Great for building thought leadership and trust for specific members of your brand.
	Customers: Fits ideal customer profiles and helps your target customers see themselves in the content.
